> Why should I volunteer?

The fact is, the majority of the individuals that are incarcerated in North Dakota will become our future neighbors. The ND DOCR relies on volunteers from our communities to be that link between incarceration and their release back to the community. Through an investment from the community and its members, they can become successful and productive citizens.

YOU can make a huge and positive difference in their lives.

> What do the volunteers do?

Volunteers serve a critical role in our correctional facilities. The ND DOCR works with volunteers from multiple educational, cultural, and religious groups.

We have volunteers who facilitate recovery programs, provide religious services, or teach art classes, college courses, and yoga.

Volunteers serve as role models for work ethic, behavior, and effective interpersonal skills. As a volunteer, YOU are influencing lifestyle changes and offering a very important link to the community. This allows residents the ability to connect or stay connected to resources in the community upon their release.

Substance abuse support such as Alcoholics Anonymous or Narcotics

Religious programming such as leading services or guiding studies

Donations

These are just a few of the opportunities available. We welcome new ideas and services from our community members.

“ I want to help the guys realize that among the many hurdles along the way, more than likely for the rest of their lives, there are people who do care and are willing to help them as long as they are also willing to help themselves. I want to be a part of that. ”
